This week, leading up to Indigenous Peoples Day on June 21st, we'll be celebrating Indigenous Peoples Week at Argyle.

Indigenous Peoples Day honours the history, heritage, and diverse cultures of First Nations, Métis, and Inuit peoples across Canada.

It was officially recognized in 1996 and takes place on the summer solstice, the longest day of the year, a day that holds cultural and spiritual significance for many Indigenous communities.

Throughout this week, we'll be sharing stories, history, and voices from Indigenous communities through the morning announcements.

- Day 2 – Indigenous Languages
Good morning, Argyle! Today we're focusing on Indigenous languages. Did you know there are more than 70 Indigenous languages in Canada, across 12 distinct language families? But many of these languages are endangered because of colonial policies like residential schools, the displacement of indigenous children, and the Indian Act, where children were punished for speaking their language. Today, communities are working hard to revitalize and preserve their languages through education, apps, and storytelling. If you hear someone speak Dakelh, Cree, Squamish, or any other Indigenous language, take a moment to appreciate the strength it took to keep it alive. Language is identity, memory, and pride. Let's honour that today. Thanks argyle! We'll be back with more information tomorrow.

Wednesday, June 18, 2025

- Day 3 – Indigenous Art and Storytelling

Today for indigenous week we'll be focusing on Indigenous art and storytelling. Storytelling has always been central to Indigenous culture. It's how knowledge, history, and traditions are passed down. From oral legends to carvings, beading, and contemporary painting, Indigenous art tells stories of resilience and connection to the land.

Artists like Christi Belcourt, Kent Monkman, and Norval Morrisseau have inspired change through their work. All Indigenous students are invited to a pizza lunch in room 150.

Stories shape identity- and we're grateful to learn from them. Thanks for listening argyle, see you tomorrow!

- The Argyle varsity football team kicked off their season last Friday with a hard-fought battle against the West Vancouver highlanders, winning the game 14-7. It was a tight game with our pipers leading 14-0 forcing the highlanders to fight back, leaving our pipers to fight till the last seconds of the fourth quarter. The offensive line made strong blocks against their defence, whilst our defensive line tackled the opposition, leading to a near shut out, securing them the win. Great work pipers!
