Athlete of the week

This week, we highlight two athletes from the grade 9 girls' volleyball team. Sofia Bingeman led her JV team through her actions, setting the standard at every practice and game. Whether she was asked to set, play outside, or cheer from the bench, Sofia always embraced her role with positivity and purpose. As team captain, she led by example- showing discipline, communication, and unwavering effort for her teammates. Our second athlete is Breanna Quinivista. She brought a steady calmness and fun energy to the JV team, creating a positive atmosphere wherever she went. Her ability to stay composed under pressure and lift others up made her a trusted teammate. Beyond the court, Breanna's creativity shone through as she helped lead the team's social media, capturing the spirit and connection of the group. Congrats to these girls for a great job this volleyball season!

On Saturday, Carson's Ethics Bowl team participated in their first formal tournament, co-hosted by the SFU Department of Philosophy and the SFU Debating Society. Leoncine Fossourier, Reese Galbraith, McKenna Krause, Elli Mavragani and Brooklyn Scotland presented well-reasoned, ethically based arguments and successfully defended their positions through both opponents' commentary and judges' questions. You represented Carson and the North Shore well through four challenging rounds of competition. Well done, Ethics Team!

Do you like strategy, difficult choices and teamwork? If so, check out the Diplomacy Club. It's all about strategic negotiations, planning and betrayal. Enjoy a game full of action and choices, where you must decide who to trust and who to betray. Check it out in their info meeting in Room D203 on Nov. 19, Wednesday, at lunch if your interested.
