Bargaining update

It has been five years since we last conducted collective bargaining, and we are looking forward to returning to the table with both of our unions – the North Vancouver Teachers' Association and CUPE Local 389. Bargaining at the provincial level, between BC Public School Employers' Association and BC Teachers' Federation, is underway. At the local table, the North Vancouver Teachers' Association and the North Vancouver School District commenced bargaining last week, with each party already tabling their opening proposals. The exchange was positive and we look forward to successful negotiations to come. The K-12 CUPE Presidents' Council has signed a Provincial Framework Agreement with BC Public School Employers' Association that will be available to be included in local agreements within a prescribed time frame. This framework provides funding for wage increases, benefits improvements and other areas of focus, such as safety in the workplace and provincial job evaluation. Local CUPE bargaining will commence in May.

School Visits

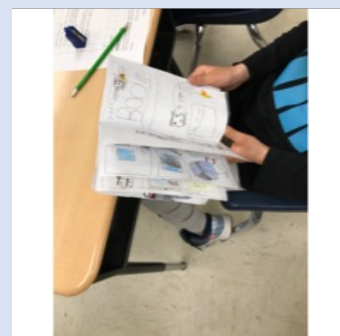

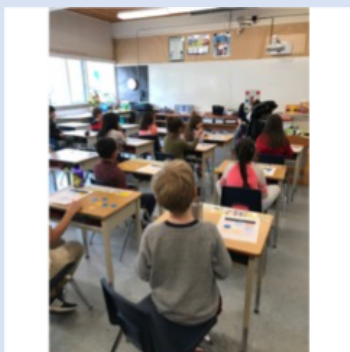

Seycove Secondary

At Seycove Secondary I toured the school, popping into many classes. I checked out the outstanding photography of students doing a "100 photos project", was lucky enough to step into band class to hear the students play, and visited Lorrie Welch's Science 12 class. Just a week later I was lucky enough to return to Seycove for their "Our History" event, which is a partnership with the Canadian Centre for Gender and Sexual Diversity to bring the history of LGBTQ+ rights in Canada to students. The event was organized by teacher Andrea Yeo and was a huge success.

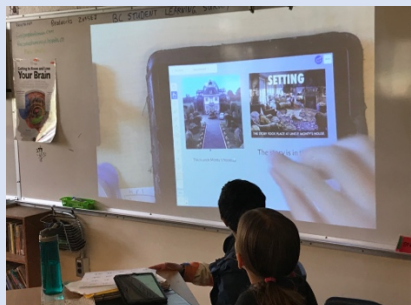

Sherwood Park Elementary

At Sherwood Park I spent time practicing mindful breathing with the kindergarten students in Darlene Sulis' class. I then spent recess in the staffroom before visiting with a very special student who was using a visual controlled computer system to read. It was amazing to see her be able to flip pages and choose sections with her eye control alone. She then lead her class in a game of bingo by selecting the bingo colours with her eyes – the entire class was having tremendous fun and was fully engaged. I also got to see book making in grade 3/4 with Aliko Constantis. The students wrote, drew and created books from start to finish. The stories were incredibly creative and well-written.

Brooksbank Elementary

In Wendy Tozer's class, students were doing book talks – reading, reviewing and presenting their book reviews to class. The integration of technology into this lesson was quite impressive, as students were able to use iPads to create their reviews and presentations. Students were also working on pre-contact Indigenous Canadian history projects. Susanne Steffens' grade 3 class shared their favourite moments from a recent fieldtrip to the Museum of Anthropology. Students in Angela McKay's grade 7 class were getting ready for secondary school by practicing essay writing. I was also able to visit with Lasse Leslie, whose music class was learning guitar.

Cheakamus Centre

Cheakamus Centre was full to the brim when I visited. Braemar Elementary students were taking part in the Skw'unc-wa longhouse program, and Queen Mary Elementary and Highlands Elementary school students were taking part in Outdoor School. I was able to visit the programs, dine with the staff and students for lunch, tour the property, and learn about the many renewal and revitalization initiatives and projects underway.
