

WORK EXPERIENCE Stories

James' Shadow at DNV

James signed up for the Work Experience course in the hopes of learning more about a career in engineering. Mrs. Knapp and the staff at the District of North Vancouver were happy to help facilitate a job shadow experience for James so he could see some of the ways professional engineers spend their days.

The first day started with James joining the Planning Department where he learned about urban design and policy. The next days were filled with meeting staff from some of the many departments in the District, travelling to project sites and visiting the Operations Centre.

James loved the experience and took away a new appreciation for the ins and outs of engineering, "I realized that engineering is a broad yet complex discipline that requires not only the calculations, formulas, and graphs, but also requires interpersonal skills, collaboration, and dedication".

A big thank you to the District of North Vancouver and all the staff involved in providing James this hands-on experience. Experiences like this are invaluable for students and their career exploration and planning
